(១) ការដាក់ជូន
(២) ការពិភាក្សា
(៣) ការទទួល
(៤) រយៈពេល

ម្រាប់បំណងសម្រាប់ប្រជាជន (UPR) និងកម្ពុជា

ម្រាប់បំណងសម្រាប់ប្រជាជន (UPR) និងកម្ពុជា បានប្រឈមប្រារសម្រាប់សិទ្ធភាពដ៏ឈរីអនុសាយមោរេបាយការពិភាក្សានេះ។ តែយូជាៗកំពុងប្រការជាច្រកកម្ពុជា ចូលរួមក្នុងការពិភាក្សាទី២ ។ ប្រការជាសម្រាប់ឈ្មោះការពិភាក្សានេះបានបានប្រឈមប្រារសម្រាប់សិទ្ធភាពវិធានការប្រមូលប្រមូលអនុសាយមោរេបាយសម្រាប់សិទ្ធភាពរបស់អង្គការសហប្រជាជន (UNHCR) និងអង្គការសងមសុីវិឡ (ICRC) ។
What is the Universal Periodic Review (UPR)?

The Universal Periodic Review (UPR) is a United Nations (UN) mechanism to consider the human rights records of all the States in the world. During the UPR, States can make comments about what they have done to respect human rights while other UN member States can make recommendations on how they could improve human rights.

How Does the UPR Work?

The UPR consists of the following phases:

1. Submission of Reports
   - The State under review, the UN, NGOs, national institutions and UN agencies send reports to the UPR Working Group about the human rights situation in the country under review.
   - You can send the report online: www.ohchr.org/UPR

2. Interactive Discussion
   - Any State can make recommendations about how it could improve human rights in the country under review, but at the end of the Interactive Discussion, the State under review speaks first, presenting the human rights situation in its country. Then UN Member States can make comments, ask questions or make recommendations on how the State could improve the human rights situation in its country. The interactive discussion happens during the meeting of the UPR working group in Geneva. NGOs, national institutions and UN agencies send an oral comment and submit a written report.

3. Acceptance of Recommendations
   - Any State is a recommendation accepts or rejects the recommendations based on which recommendations will be accepted or not.
   - When the State accepts a recommendation, it commits itself to implement it and to take the necessary actions to protect and enforce the human rights involved.

4. The “Follow-up” Period
   - The period between one review and the next one is called the “Follow-up.” It is the moment during which the State under review implements the recommendations received. At this point, the State has to do the necessary changes to accomplish the goal of the recommendations, such as legislative reforms, policy measures, etc.

What Can Civil Society Do?

Any State can make recommendations about how it could improve human rights in the country under review. Member States can make comments, ask questions or make recommendations on how the State could improve the human rights situation in its country. The interaction discussion happens during the meeting of the UPR working group in Geneva. NGOs, national institutions and UN agencies send an oral comment and submit a written report.

Any State, however, can attend the discussion but cannot take the floor.

Cambodia and the UPR

During its first review in 2009, Cambodia accepted all 138 recommendations States made, but did not implement most of them. In 2019, Cambodia has accepted 138 recommendations. The period between one review and the next one is called the “Follow-up.” It is the moment during which the State under review implements the recommendations received. At this point, the State has to do the necessary changes to accomplish the goal of the recommendations, such as legislative reforms, policy measures, etc.

The period between one review and the next one is called the “Follow-up.” It is the moment during which the State under review implements the recommendations received. At this point, the State has to do the necessary changes to accomplish the goal of the recommendations, such as legislative reforms, policy measures, etc.

Cambodia accepted all 138 recommendations States made in 2009. However, Cambodia did not implement any of them. In 2009, Cambodia made recommendations to the State under review.

Cambodia reviewed the human rights performance of Cambodia over the last four years.

CCHR, founded in November 2002, is a non-aligned, independent, non-governmental organization that works to promote and protect democracy and respect for human rights – primarily civil and political rights. It works to promote and protect democracy and respect for human rights – primarily civil and political rights.

The UPR in Number

- 2008: Cambodia reviewed the human rights performance of Cambodia over the last four years.
- 2009: Cambodia accepted all 138 recommendations States made.
- 2019: Cambodia accepted 138 recommendations.

Additional Information:

- Cambodia did not make any reports to the UPR.
- Cambodia has accepted all recommendations States made.
- Cambodia did not implement most of the recommendations.
- Cambodia has accepted all recommendations States made.

The UPR in Number

- 2008: Cambodia reviewed the human rights performance of Cambodia over the last four years.
- 2009: Cambodia accepted all 138 recommendations States made.
- 2019: Cambodia accepted 138 recommendations.

Additional Information:

- Cambodia did not make any reports to the UPR.
- Cambodia has accepted all recommendations States made.
- Cambodia did not implement most of the recommendations.
- Cambodia has accepted all recommendations States made.

The UPR in Number

- 2008: Cambodia reviewed the human rights performance of Cambodia over the last four years.
- 2009: Cambodia accepted all 138 recommendations States made.
- 2019: Cambodia accepted 138 recommendations.

Additional Information:

- Cambodia did not make any reports to the UPR.
- Cambodia has accepted all recommendations States made.
- Cambodia did not implement most of the recommendations.
- Cambodia has accepted all recommendations States made.